

31% Growth
in population by 2035

230 buildings

54m Square Feet

27,160,956 KgCO<sub>2</sub>/yr
Reduced carbon output

Average annual rainfall across Seattle

Data from Seattle Public Utilities shows varying annual precipitation in different areas.

Local News | Microsoft

Rogue cellphone tracker alarms Seattle privacy activists

Originally published August 4, 2014 at 8:02 pm | Updated August 5, 2014 at 7:36 am

Phil Moeck, left, and Lee Colleton are among Seattle Privacy Coalition activists urging city oversight of surveillance technology. Colleton picked up a Wi-Fi signal last month from a police communications node — the white apparatus on the utility pole — inadvertently turned on.

SECTION SPONSOR
ROSEANNE BARR
MAY 26 10:49

By Lynn Thompson
Seattle Times staff reporter

More than a year after Seattle police promised to not turn on a network of surveillance cameras and communication

URBAN PLANNING

TUESDAY 8, SEPTEMBER 2015

Seattle installs new system to track individual drivers

by David Kroman

Gray boxes, holding the wiring for nearby traffic signals, dot more than 1,000 intersections throughout Seattle. They fade into the background by design, many of them further camouflaged with graffiti and posters for candidates or concerts.

It would be no surprise, then, if you've missed a new accouterment added to many of these boxes in the last year: a small rubber antenna, like a lily pad or tiddlywink, perched on

SEATTLE POLICE

